TEAK INDUSTRY

Natural teak decking has usually been the desired choice of decking in the marine industry but its only affordable to a lucky few. Now that Burmese teak has been exhausted to levels well beyond sustainability and with deforestation becoming a real problem there are bans on exports, and plantations are not able to produce the same quality teak so it explains why synthetic teak decking is a rapidly growing market year after year. It is time for traditional teak decking to move over. As a Permateek distributor you can join the biggest new trend of the marine industry and hugely increase your profits. Permateek is at the top in the field of decking and dedicated to research and development to create products that are admired the world over.

ABOUT US:

Permateek was set up in 2003 as it was felt that there was a gap in the market for a high quality synthetic decking product which would be fitted to a high standard by fully trained and accountable installers. Our instincts were soon proven correct and immediately following our first boat show appearance at the Southampton Boat Show in the UK back in 2005 we had a full order book from customers requiring Permateek decks and also managed to recruit our first three fabricators/installers. Now some 10 years later Permateek synthetic decking has earned its place as a brand leader in the synthetic decking industry and is available across the world. We continue to improve on our product and systems and to build on our solid brand image based on good service and extremely high quality.

The Permateek decking system is a premium product made in England. Each decking profile is made from UV stabilised outdoor grade high quality virgin PVC. The production, technology and fitting techniques employed means that Permateek decks have reached the point that they can easily be confused with real teak. Many of our satisfied customers have commented that they had never considered installing a synthetic deck before they discovered the convincing appearance of Permateek. We have now increased our efforts to open branches and appoint fitters all around the world to expand our service in order to allow more people to enjoy the luxury of a Permateek deck. We have taken synthetic decking to a new height and our fitted decks look as much at home on a sixty metre luxury yacht as they do on a small dinghy or power boat.
